It's touted as street wear with edge, sex appeal and individuality and, it would seem, celebrity clients like Todd Bertuzzi, P.Diddy, and Nicole Ritchie agree.

The threads are from Vancouver fashion design company Deuce Custom Ink, and you can check them out for yourself tomorrow night at the Deuce's Wild Carnival Fashion Show & Concert at the Commodore Ballroom.

And if the thought of attending a fashion show ruffles your retrosexual feathers, fret not, the carnival features a concert by Vancouver hip-hop group the Swollen Members, Cory Lee, and beats by master trance wizard DJ Tazix.

All proceeds from the event are being donated to Canuck Place Children's Hospice. Doors open at 7 p.m. Fashion show starts at 8:30. Tickets available at Ticketmaster: $100 for the VIP Party Lounge, Fashion Show and Concert; $50 for the fashion show and concert; and $20 for the concert only. Visit www.deuceink.com for more information.
